

The Moscow Campaign

COMBAT

(Case S) The parenthesized units (EB units) have no Zone of Control, but do retain their Combat Strength for the defense only – even when alone. The bracketed units retain their Zones of Control, but must be stacked with a non-bracketed unit in order to attack or defend. Bracketed units must be moved onto in order to be destroyed. They may not be attacked by normal adjacent combat in the Combat Phase if they are alone.

VICTORY CONDITIONS

The first paragraph contains an erroneous statement concerning the computation of victory. Beginning with, "At the end..." and ending with "...to award victory" should be deleted. The correct explanation of computing victory levels is given in the paragraph labelled "Levels of Victory." In the listing of Victory Points awarded for objectives, the Germans do not need to be in supply to gain the two different Victory Point awards for Moscow.

WEATHER

Under the "Summary of Weather Effects, effects on both Players' units: Freeze," the frozen rivers and lakes affect neither movement nor combat.

TERRAIN EFFECTS CHART

Under the Combat effects column, the phrase "add two to the die roll" should always be changed to "subtract two from the die roll."
